Abstract:	The world has changed. The future of work has arrived. There are heightened expectations for organizations and teams to respond with efficiency, agility, and innovative solutions. A factor that is often overlooked is that our digital times are only successful with a commitment and focus on leadership of people. Performance happens at the team level, and the most important factor in success is the capability of people to work within a team culture of collaboration and learning. This virtual session will provide the foundation for the factors that lead to exceptional leadership and team success.
Main topics:	Participants will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> > Identify what the most successful project leaders do > Analyze and differentiate social contexts that contribute to successful project teams. > Describe the essential dimensions of a measurable framework for predicting and sustaining high team performance. > Implement at least one successful leadership strategy for immediate use in their project teams.
